Varese is a lively town located in Northern Italy, on a hilly territory. Its surroundings are rich in rivers and lakes, and it is at the foot of Mount Campo dei Fiori.

“Varese Città Giardino” (“Varese, the Garden City”) is the name that perfectly describes the marriage between art and nature which, from many centuries, characterizes the very soul of the city.

Its landscape, its architectural and artistic beauties have been appreciated especially since the 18th century, when the city became a holiday destination for prestigious Italian families.

At the beginning of the 20th century the “Art Nouveau” style flourished in different European countries. As a result, also in the Varese area numerous Art Nouveau-style villas and hotels were built.

The entrepreneurial genius joined the artistic one, setting in a harmonious and soul-stirring landscape.

Since the last century, Varese has excellence in sport (basketball, football, rowing and road bicycle racing) and also in the industrial field (aircrafts, motorbikes, shoes, briar pipes and kitchen furniture).

Varese's tourism is fit to satisfy the requests of every visitor.

Varese, city-garden. More than a nickname, is an image which clearly describe this city surrounded by green hills and animated by hundred of villas and gardens.

It's precisly on one of these hills, called Campigli, that at the beginning of the 1900's was built a great touristic center, linked to the city by a funicular. A great project, realized according to the laws of Art Nouveau : the Palace Grand Hotel Varese, planned by Joseph Sommaruga in 1911.

Restructured for conforming to the times, the Palace has always preserved the characteristics of the initial project and it represents one of the best example of the Liberty in Lombardy.
